Ukraine, EU take big step towards each other Does Ukraine benefit from signing the Association Agreement?

By signing the economic section of the association agreement with the European Union on June 27th, Ukraine's President Petro Poroshenko finally completed the agreement that triggered a revolution toppling his predecessor, Viktor Yanukovich, for backing out of the same deal. Poroshenko used the same pen to ink the document in Brussels that Yanukovich was supposed to use during the Nov. 29 summit in Vilnius, but resisted despite hours of persuasion from European officials that night. <http://goo.gl/3fcKPf>

Cease-Fire in Eastern Ukraine Nears End

NEWSLETTER #29. 24-30 June 2014

A cease-fire in eastern Ukraine is set to expire on June 30 amid growing public opposition in Kyiv against an extension of the truce. <http://goo.gl/JS2zPk>

OFFICIAL: Poroshenko's statement after June 29th phone call with Putin, Merkel and Hollande. In the course of the conversation, the Head of State informed the interlocutors that Ukraine completely fulfills its commitments on the implementation of the peace plan in accordance to the decision of the European Council and unilaterally complies with the ceasefire regime proclaimed until June 30, 22:00. <http://goo.gl/SQzqLF>

June 29: Protesters gathered in central Kyiv to demand an end to a cease-fire in eastern Ukraine, where security forces are battling pro-Russian separatists. <http://goo.gl/SysPRW> ; <http://goo.gl/NOkXH3>

If after June 30th, when the unilateral ceasefire comes to an end, the government does not make concrete steps, the citizens of the east will start saving Donbas from terrorists themselves. <http://goo.gl/rls6By>

Ukraine accused pro-Russian rebels of starting at least seven skirmishes on June 28th in violation of a cease-fire, and urged President Vladimir Putin's government to "stop hiring and recruiting militants." Rebels killed five Ukrainian soldiers in violation of a truce extended by the country's government after the European Union gave Russia three days to quell the insurgency or face deeper sanctions. Thirteen soldiers also were wounded in attacks by pro-Russian separatists in Ukraine's eastern region while five suffered shell shock, Ukraine

National Security Council spokesman Andriy Lysenko told reporters in Kiev. <http://goo.gl/sZe2ry>

Proof that Russia is helping to foment unrest in Ukraine is mounting, with Kyiv this week saying it has irrefutable, "smoking-gun" evidence of Russian military vehicles and weapons being used against its forces in the country's embattled east. <http://goo.gl/Y7uiLX>

Russian President Vladimir Putin has insisted that Viktor Medvedchuk participate in the tripartite peace negotiations in Donbas, and not simply because he is Putin's confidant. Putin's main goal is to make Medvedchuk, head of the Ukrainian Choice movement (pro-Russian political organization — Ed.), the governor of the Donetsk Oblast and then to return him to Ukrainian politics. <http://goo.gl/RlyXeR>

Ukraine's Humanitarian Crisis Deepens

Morgan Stanley's representative in Ukraine sees hope for nation amid gloomy forecasts.

A senior UN human rights official this week said that in the past two weeks the number of displaced persons in Ukraine has doubled to more than 46,000. But the true number is likely higher due to the lack of a formal registration system. <http://goo.gl/L8Ly07>

New York-headquartered financial giant Morgan Stanley, which manages a client asset portfolio of $1.9 trillion, may be considered one of the rare optimists this year about Ukraine. It predicts only a four percent drop in the nation's economy. Others, including Moody's international credit rating agency, expect a drop of up to 10 percent. <http://goo.gl/J8IFZz>

Living Without Russian Gas: Hard, but Possible. Since Russia's Gazprom cut gas supplies to Ukraine on June 16, the Ukrainian government has been intensively looking for an energy model that provides total independence from Russian blue fuel. Energy experts think Ukraine may succeed in this.

Tax Ministry: Some $250 million USD in state funds were allocated to fraudulent companies in 2014. Ukraine's use of funds obtained under the Kyoto carbon trading scheme has long been under the spotlight. Allegations of misuse of "Kyoto money" dogged ex-Prime Minister Yulia Tymoshenko, who was imprisoned for more than two years after an abuse-of-office conviction derided as politically motivated. Under overthrown President Viktor Yanukovich's government, the scale of alleged corruption related to these funds only increased. Now fresh evidence suggests schemes developed during his years in power threaten to derail Ukraine's transition to a more democratic and less corrupt future. <http://goo.gl/nNJvZl>

Trust in the president, and in the EU, will be undermined if the latter fails to make good on its current threats of sanctions

The decision to extend a ceasefire which only one side was respecting was doubtless taken under pressure from the EU, and not widely understood at home. Trust in the president, and in the EU, will be undermined if the latter fails to make good on its threats of sanctions this time. <http://goo.gl/XVGMGg>

Another $50 million in investment coming to Ukraine's hot IT sector

Dmytro Lysytsky, who previously headed the digital department of fugitive former billionaire Serhiy Kurchenko's Ukrainian Media Holding, is launching an investment fund focused on financing large and local high-tech companies. The fund will have a portfolio of $50 million, Lysytsky said in an interview with the Kyiv Post, while a pool of Ukrainian and American investors will be contributing capital. The first investments should be made in the fall.

U.S. Tech Companies Have a Lot at Stake in Ukraine. An astounding number of American technology companies employ engineers in Ukraine, but you might never know it. The Ukrainian tech industry is responsible for Ford's in-car infotainment systems, Reuter's award-winning photography app, Nokia's customer retail experience, and Deutsche Bank's Risk Management System, among many others.

Local Zaporizhzhya-based jet engine builder Motor Sich announced on May 16 that it has established a working group with a leading Polish helicopter manufacturer, PZL Swidnik, in anticipation of joint production of helicopters that would involve Ukrainian engines. <http://goo.gl/bCCKME>

Ukraine: An Old Country Searching For A New Soul. Ukraine has emerged as the "it" country in the global spotlight. With 56 international delegations at the inauguration of Ukraine president Petro Poroshenko and a noticeable spike in cultural and intellectual life prompted by the revolution in Kyiv, Ukraine stands out as an old country with a new soul—just what the West needs. <http://goo.gl/eTmn7i>
